Kamloops Residential Real Estate Market Records Below Average November

KAMLOOPS, B.C. – December 5th, 2022. Residential real estate sales for the month of November in the region saw sales dip heading into the holiday season, reports the Association of Interior REALTORS® (the Association).

A total of 844 residential unit sales were recorded across the Association region in November representing a 48.4% decrease in sales compared to the number of units sold during the hyperactive market of November 2021, with a decrease of 15.6% compared to last month.

“Although the numbers seem far below what we have become accustomed to, comparing sales from this year to last year would be like comparing apples to oranges,” says the Association of Interior REALTORS® President Lyndi Cruickshank, adding that “comparing to a typical seasonal pre-pandemic November would represent a more accurate comparison over the frenzied market over the last few years, which would show that we are currently not that far off from an average November.”

New residential listings saw a moderate decline of 4.6% within the region compared to the same month last year with 1,357 new listings recorded. However, the overall inventory saw a healthy 85.3% boost over the availability in November 2021 with 6,980 units currently on the market, providing more options to buyers.

“While it’s great to see that the number of active listings is higher than it has been for a long time, the market remains tight as new inventory seems to be flattening,” notes Cruickshank, adding “this is not unusual for this time of year as sellers hold off on listing while they are enjoying the holiday season.”

Within the Kamloops and District region, there were 130 residential unit sales recorded last month, down from the 144 recorded in October, with a decrease of 50% compared to November 2021.

The benchmark price, a better representation of value compared to the average or median price as it represents a dwelling of “typical attributes”, saw an increase across all home categories in the Kamloops and District area compared to the November 2021, with the greatest increase occurring once again within the townhome category with a 16.9% increase coming in at $540,500.

There were 264 new listings added in November in the Kamloops and District region, which was a 5.6% increase compared to the same time last year. Overall inventory, or active listings, saw a substantial 145.4% boost compared to November 2021, coming in at 2,017.

“As with all other areas within the Association, the Kamloops and District region saw a below average November in terms of sales activity. However, this injection of new inventory, while not substantial, may add some welcome relief to buyers looking for more options,” says Cruickshank.
